

Making Children Count: Children, Violence, Homelessness and the Law

PUBLICATION ORDER FORM & TAX INVOICE

This booklet provides a variety of snapshots based on research, current policy and practice and argues why we need to be aware of and support policies important to children's welfare. It is a call to action for each of us by highlighting children's experiences of homelessness and/or domestic and family violence. A number of recommendations are made which include the urgent need for more resources for children and a call for Family Law reform. This booklet is recommended for workers in the field and women whose children have been affected by homelessness and/or domestic or family violence.
